Program Mission

- Strengthen Berkeley's academic, intellectual and institutional ties to Austrian universities and research centers by promoting the exchange of scholars and joint research projects
- Support, in cooperation with the UC Berkeley Institute of Slavic, East European, and Eurasian Studies, graduate and undergraduate teaching and research on the Berkeley campus about topics relating to Austria, both from a contemporary and a historical perspective
- Support study abroad and internship programs for Berkeley students in Austria
- Cooperate with the network of Austria Centers around the world to foster a global network of Austria scholars
- Provide a platform for conferences, colloquia and public lectures on Austria in order to disseminate knowledge of and interest in Austria in California
- Enrich IES's research and teaching mission at the Berkeley campus and within the nine sister-campuses of the University of California

The Austrian Studies Program 2023-2024

The Austrian Studies Program at the University of California, Berkeley was founded in 2017. It is an integral part of the Institute of European Studies (IES), home to the leading concentration of researchers and scholars on European affairs and the European Union in the Western United States. Since its founding, the Program has developed to become a vibrant initiative within the Institute with the overarching mission to encourage academic cooperation between Berkeley and Austria, and to support innovative scholarship on Austrian topics in the humanities, social sciences, business, and economics.

In the second half of the twentieth century, UC Berkeley also became a recognized leader in Austrian Studies, especially in the areas of language and literature, art history, and political and cultural history. In literary studies, for example, Heinz Politzer was America's leading expert in Kafka scholarship; the great legal theorist Hans Kelsen, author of the 1920 Austrian Constitution, worked in Berkeley; civil law scholar Albert Armin Ehrenzweig was a professor at the law school between 1948 and 1974; Peter Selz, who founded the Berkeley Art Museum, was a much-celebrated authority on Central European Art, while historical scholars from Charles Gulick through Carl Schorske and William Slottman made Berkeley the place in the United States to study the history of the Habsburg Monarchy and the Austrian republics.

The current Program counts nearly twenty affiliated faculty members from a range of departments including German, Political Science, History, and Sociology. In partnership with local and international organizations, most notably the UC Berkeley Institute for Slavic, East European, and Eurasian Studies, the Program provides a platform for conferences, colloquia, and public lectures in order to disseminate knowledge of and interest in the former Habsburg Empire as well as contemporary Austria and Central Europe in California. Over the past years, the Program has been pleased to host a rich series of events open to the campus community and the general public on topics relating to Austria and Central Europe, both from a contemporary and a historical perspective.

A key goal of the Austrian Studies Program is to support graduate and undergraduate teaching and research on topics relating to Austria, both from a contemporary and a historical perspective. In cooperation with the Austrian Marshall Foundation, it runs a doctoral student research exchange program with Austria and, in cooperation with the Botstiber Institute for Austrian-American Studies, it runs an annual compact seminar in Austrian Studies with an Austrian visiting professor. The Program also provides funding to the UC Berkeley Library to enhance its materials and collections relative to Austria and Central Europe. The staff and affiliated students, faculty, and research of the Austrian Studies Program at IES encourage academic cooperation and exchange between Berkeley and Austria, and support innovative scholarship on Austrian topics across the disciplines.

2023-24 EU Fellow Agata Kotkowska

IES was delighted to host our 2023-24 EU Fellow, Agata Kotkowska. The EU Fellows Program enables staff from the EU Commission or Parliament to spend up to one year as a Visiting Scholar on the Berkeley campus. During the fellowship, scholars carry out research on a project related to their work, as well as undertake outreach activities, thus acting as "ambassadors" for the EU.

With over two decades of professional experience within the European Commission, Agata Kotkowska brings insights into the European regional, energy, and environmental policies. Trained as an economist, her expertise focuses on sustainable finance, innovative financial instruments, green budgeting, and effective utilization of European public funding for the green transition towards carbon-neutral Europe.

Currently affiliated with the Institute of European Studies as a visiting researcher, she is exploring the financial innovations essential for the private capital market to leverage investments in support of biodiversity requirements in Europe and across the globe.

She looks forward to engaging with fellow researchers and the university community to collectively pave the way to a more sustainable, environmentally conscious, and financially resilient future.

2023 IES Undergraduate Conference

On November 17th, the Institute of European Studies hosted the annual Undergraduate Research Conference. The Conference, titled From Kiev to Brussels: Understanding the Implications of the War in Ukraine in a Broader European Context, featured nine presentations from UC Berkeley, Stanford, and De Anza College students. The Conference was organized by the IES URAP team led by Conference Chairperson Luca Zislin.

After introductory remarks from Professor Jeroen Dewulf, students presented research related to the ongoing War in Ukraine. Jinze Hu, Ellie Andersen, and Grant Gillinger presented research related to Ukrainian civil society. Afterwards, Alexander Richter, Christina Mueller, and Zachary Yan presented their research regarding security and defense. Finally, Brett Dunham, Ali Ansari, and Andrey Kapustin presented economic research.

The Conference concluded with a keynote address by Evan Reade, who previously served as the Director for Western Europe on the National Security Council during the Obama Administration before serving as the International Affairs Advisor to California Lt. Governor Eleni Kounalakis. Students had the opportunity to ask Reade questions about his career before a reception for all speakers and guests.

2024 SCHUMAN CHALLENGE

On April 4 and 5, two undergraduate students, accompanied by one of their advisors, Rachaël Longuépée, had the opportunity to present at the Delegation of the European Union to the United States. Lisette Gomez-Galvan and Christopher Ojeda collaborated with their program advisors at the Institute of European Studies to participate in the Schuman Challenge, an annual foreign affairs competition. Their approach centered on how the European Union and the United States could fortify collaboration with Latin America, particularly Mexico, by prioritizing shared goals of global peace and security in the fight against drug trafficking. The judges were impressed by their innovative approach and commended them for raising awareness to vital topics such as femicide, labor rights, and the USMCA multilateral trade agreement. The competition enabled the students to strengthen their grasp of global affairs and partake in rigorous dialogue regarding transatlantic issues. Additionally, they had the opportunity to network and engage with the EU Ambassador to the United States, Jovita Neliupšienė, the Chief of Staff of the Assistant Secretary General of the Organization of American States, Celia A. Prince, and representatives from various sections of the Delegation in D.C. a leading figure from political or scholarly circles.

An Assessment of Current Political Issues in Europe: A Fireside Chat with Ambassador Wolfgang Petritsch

In October 2023, the Institute of European Studies in collaboration with the Institute of Slavic, East European and Eurasian Studies, the Austrian Studies Program, the Institute of International Studies, the German Department, and the Austrian Marshall Plan Foundation hosted a discussion with the President of the Austrian Marshall Plan Foundation and diplomat, Wolfgang Petritsch, moderated by Professor Jeroen Dewulf, Director of IES, and Professor John Connelly, Director of ISEEES.

This discussion focused on the unique political situation that Europe finds itself in as it faces conflict both internally and externally. Petritsch described how political perceptions in Europe have changed over the past decade from the perspective of the European Security Strategy. The panelists also discuss how the United States' soft and hard power in relation to Europe has changed. Although Europe does remain largely dependent on the United States for its security, Petritsch claimed that the question of whether there is a "united West" anymore has been raised as a result of European alienation and individualism.

The panelist then turned to discuss some particular issues facing Europe currently including the war in Ukraine, the rise of the extreme right, and the migration crisis. Petritsch attributed the rise of the extreme right to people's recognition of the weakening of the nation-state and their desires to make it strong again despite this being politically unlikely due to European integration and the increasingly connected world. Finally, the panelist briefly discussed border control and noted that Europe's difficulties lay in that it is surrounded by crises, but lacks the cooperation to make swift decisions.

Competing Foreign Policies at the Jasenovac Memorial Site

The Peter N. Kujachich Lecture on Serbian and Montenegrin Studies.

In January 2024, Jelena Subotić explored the contested histories and contested meanings of Jasenovac, the commemorative site of the largest death and concentration camp administered by the fascist Independent State of Croatia during World War II. As the site where at least 85,000 Serbs, Jews, Roma and others were murdered and many more tortured in uniquely gruesome ways, Jasenovac has always been the central commemorative location of victims of Croatian fascism. Since the end of the war, and especially since the breakup of the former Yugoslavia, Jasenovac has become a site of production of conflicting national narratives – of Serbia, Croatia and Bosnia's Republika Srpska – all of whom use the Jasenovac site to pursue very different and mutually exclusive national histories and public memories.

Uprooted: How post-WWII Population Transfers Remade Europe

Each year, millions of people are uprooted from their homes by wars, repression, natural disasters, and climate change. In March 2024, Charnysh provided a new perspective on the developmental consequences of forced displacement, highlighting how it can strengthen receiving states and benefit local economies in the long run, notwithstanding its high costs to affected individuals. Using novel statistical and qualitative evidence on mass population movements in Poland and West Germany after WWII, she demonstrates that the rupture of social ties and increased cultural diversity in affected communities shored up the demand for state-provided resources, which facilitated the accumulation of state capacity. Charnysh further shows that over time, areas that received a larger and more diverse influx of migrants after the war achieved higher levels of entrepreneurship, education, and income. The book challenges common assumptions about the costs of forced displacement and cultural diversity and proposes a novel mechanism linking wars to state-building.

Manuela Boatcă | The Other Enslavement. Notes on Unthinkable Europeans in Unequal Europes

In March 2024, Manuela Boatcă spoke on the inter-imperial history of the European East at the crossroads of the Habsburg, the Ottoman, and the Russian/Tsarist empires suggests that the coloniality that gradually engulfed the world after 1492 constituted a rather late moment in a larger inter-imperial configuration of power that predated the emergence of the Western Atlantic expansion and vied with it. Throughout the European East, the largely neglected process of the enslavement of the Roma started as a practice of enslaving prisoners of war. Drawing on Michel Rolph Trouillot's analysis of the Haitian Revolution as an "unthinkable history" made by enslaved Black people, Prof. Dr. Manuela Boatcă argues that European politics of memory will remain incomplete as long as the history and the present of anti-Roma racism, the legacies of Romani enslavement, and the implications of such histories for the (im)possibility of constructing an identity as Romani Europeans are deemed unthinkable in an Occidentalist white Europe.

Manuela Boatcă is Professor of Sociology and Head of School of the Global Studies Programme at the University of Freiburg, Germany. She has a degree in English and German languages and literatures and a PhD in sociology. She was Visiting Professor at IUPERJ, Rio de Janeiro in 2007/08 and Professor of Sociology of Global Inequalities at the Latin American Institute of the Freie Universität Berlin from 2012 to 2015. She has published widely on world-systems analysis, decolonial perspectives on global inequalities, gender and citizenship in modernity/coloniality, and the geopolitics of knowledge in Eastern Europe, Latin America, and the Caribbean. In 2018 she was awarded an ACLS collaborative fellowship alongside literary scholar Anca Parvulescu (Washington University in St. Louis, USA), for a comparative project on inter-imperiality in Transylvania. The resulting co-authored book, titled "Creolizing the Modern. Transylvania Across Empires" was published in English, German, and Romanian in 2022.

Shock Without Therapy: The Political Economy of the Postsocialist Mortality Crisis

In March 2024, Gábor Scheiring spoke about "The Political Economy of the Postsocialist Mortality Crisis." Foreshadowing today's epidemic of deaths of despair hitting the United States, an unprecedented mortality crisis ravaged Eastern Europe 30 years ago as the region transitioned to capitalism. In the first 15 years after the fall of Communism, Russia lost more than three times as many people as during World War I, with male life expectancy dropping 5.7 years from 1991-1994. Over the first decade, this translated into 7.3 million excess deaths in Eastern Europe. This mortality crisis represents one of the largest demographic catastrophes seen outside famine or war in recent history and offers insightful parallels with today's America. Case and Deaton highlight that "it is no exaggeration to compare the long-standing misery of these Eastern Europeans with the wave of despair driving suicides, alcohol, and drug abuse among less-educated white Americans."

Leveraging the biggest data-gathering project on the postsocialist mortality crisis, the research underlying the lecture presents new quantitative and qualitative evidence on the role of deindustrialization, privatization, and welfare intervention in the post-socialist mortality crisis. The central thesis is that the varieties of economic shocks and policy therapies explain the intensity of the mortality crisis. The bigger the economic shock, the more people die from stress and despair. The better the therapy, the fewer people die from stress and despair. The lecture will conclude with a transatlantic comparison of deaths of despair and the future of democracy, focusing on the health crises in Hungary, Russia, and the United States.

The Future is History: Restorative Nationalism and Conflict in Post-Napoleonic Europe

In March 2024, Lars-Erik Cederman spoke on the "Restorative Nationalism and Conflict in Post-Napoleonic Europe." As illustrated by Russia's invasion of Ukraine, the recent revival of nationalism has triggered a threatening return of revisionist conflict. While the literature on nationalism shows how nationalist narratives are socially constructed, much less is known about their real-world consequences. Taking nationalist narratives seriously, we study how past "golden ages" affect territorial claims and conflict in post-Napoleonic Europe. We expect nationalists to be more likely to mobilize and initiate conflict if they can contrast the status quo to a historical polity with supposedly greater national unity and/or independence. Using data on European state borders going back to 1100, combined with spatial data covering ethnic settlement areas during the past two centuries, we find that the availability of plausible golden ages increases the risk of both domestic and interstate conflict. These findings suggest that specific historical legacies make some modern nationalisms more consequential than others.

Silvana Rachieru | Post-Phanriot Relationship of Ottoman Rums and Romanians at the End of the 19th century: Cultural Interactions and Regional Networks

In April 2024, the Center for Middle Eastern Studies in collaboration with the Modern Greek and Hellenic Studies Program at the Institute of European Studies hosted a lecture by SILVANA RACHIERU (University of Bucharest). This presentation presented some results from Rachieru's current Fulbright research project which focuses on the depiction of apost-Phanriot relationship between Ottoman Greeks and Romanian elite, in an attempt to identify a potential shift of the historical narrative concerning them from "the bad foreigner to the good relative."

Nicole Eaton | German Blood, Slavic Soil: How Nazi Königsberg Became Soviet Kaliningrad

On April 26th, the Institute of Slavic, Eastern European and Eurasian Studies in collaboration with the German Historical Institute Washington | Pacific Office Berkeley and the Institute of European Studies organized a lecture with NICOLE EATON (Boston College). Drawing on archival documents, diaries, letters, and memoirs from both sides, her talk presented an intimate look into the Nazi-Soviet encounter during World War II.

Karoline Edtstadler | Europe in the World: Challenges, Opportunities, Perspectives

In March 2024, MCI | The Entrepreneurial School in collaboration with the Institute of European Studies' Austrian Studies Program and the Austrian Marshall Plan Foundation hosted a discussion with KAROLINE EDTSTADLER. In January 2020, Karoline Edtstadler was sworn in as Federal Minister for the EU and Constitution at the Federal Chancellery by President Alexander Van der Bellen. She has served as a liaison officer for Equal Treatment Officers, first at Salzburg Regional Court and later at the Federal Ministry of Justice, and is a former member of the board of the Association of Austrian Judges' expert group on fundamental rights.

The City Without Jews: A Centenary Film Soirée

In March 2024, the Magnes featured a special screening of the historic silent film The City Without Jews accompanied live with original music composed and performed by world-renowned klezmer violinist Alicia Svigals and celebrated silent film pianist Donald Sosin. The screening will be followed by a conversation with UC San Diego Professor Emerita Cynthia Walk, UC Berkeley Professor Philipp Lenhard, and the musicians.

Alicia Svigals and Donald Sosin playing music during "The City Without Jews"

Based on the controversial and best-selling novel by Austrian-Jewish writer Hugo Bettauer, H.K. Breslauer's 1924 film adaptation of The City Without Jews (Die Stadt ohne Juden) was produced two years after the publication of the book, and, tragically, only a brief time before the satirical events depicted in the fictional story transformed into an all-too-horrific reality.

Set in the Austrian city of Utopia (a thinly-disguised stand-in for Vienna), the story follows the political and personal consequences of an antisemitic law passed by the National Assembly forcing all Jews to leave the country. At first, the decision is met with celebration, yet when the citizens of Utopia eventually come to terms with the loss of the Jewish population —and the resulting economic and cultural decline—the National Assembly must decide whether or not to invite the Jews back.

Though darkly comedic in tone, and stylistically influenced by German Expressionism, the film nonetheless contains ominous and eerily realistic sequences, such as the shots of freight trains transporting Jews out of the city. The stinging critique of Nazism in the film is part of the reason it no longer screened in public after 1933 (all complete prints were thought to be destroyed). Now, thanks to the discovery of a nitrate print in a Parisian flea market in 2015, as well as to the brilliant restoration efforts of the Filmmuseum Austria, this previously “lost” film can once again be appreciated in its unfortunately ever-relevant entirety.

2024 Botstiber Visiting Professor Benedikt C. Harzl (Univ. of Graz)

The Austrian Studies Program was delighted to host Associate Professor Dr. Benedikt C. Harzl from the University of Graz as the Botstiber Visiting Professor for the year 2024. Professor Harzl taught a UC Berkeley Botstiber Compact Seminar in Austrian Studies titled "The Russia-Ukraine Conflict in European Perspective(s), Austrian and Central European History, Politics, and Law".

Professor Benedikt C. Harzl

This course goes beyond the current Russian aggression against Ukraine and explores issues pertaining to profound legal, political and historical aspects underlying the conflict. It will employ interdisciplinary approaches to trace the origins of the Russia-Ukraine conflict. Drawing on the concept of shared history and the various influences the Habsburg Empire have exercised on identity and nation-building, the course will also probe into how historical narratives have been deliberately designed to justify encroachments upon the very sovereignty of the Ukrainian state.

Associate Professor Dr. Benedikt C. Harzl is based at the Centre for East European Law and Eurasian Studies and the Institute of International Law of the Law School of the University of Graz. He is General Editor of the journal Review of Central and East European Law and the book series Law in Eastern Europe (Brill Nijhoff). He graduated in Law at the University in Graz and completed the "East European Studies" MA program at the Free University of Berlin in 2010. After working at the Institute for European Studies in Minsk and the German Council on Foreign Relations in Berlin he was a researcher at the European Academy in Bolzano/Bozen (2007–2012) and worked as a university researcher at the REEES Centre between 2012 and 2016. He completed his PhD in law at the University of Frankfurt and was based at Johns Hopkins University between 2016 and 2017 as a Marshall Plan Foundation Fellow. He held guest professorships at Rutgers University in New Jersey (August/September 2023) and New Vision University (Tbilisi, Georgia) in May-June 2023. His habilitation thesis examined matters pertaining to international law in the post-Soviet space. He is co-editor of Unrecognized Entities: Perspectives in International, European and Constitutional Law (Brill Nijhoff, 2022) as well as Diversity Management in Russia (Routledge, 2013).

XV Annual Convention of the Centers for Austrian and Central European Studies

The second highlight of the 2023 academic year was the organization of the XV Annual Convention of the Centers for Austrian and Central European Studies. The speakers for UC Berkeley at the conference were Harry Mizumoto (Dept. of Comparative Literature), who spoke on “Art in the Age of Technology: Walter Benjamin in Ingeborg Bachmann’s Malina” and AJ Solovy (Dept. of History), who presented a lecture on “The Extreme Right and the ‘Old Nazis’ in Postwar Austria and West Germany: A Comparative History.”

Research and Exchange

BERKELEY > AUSTRIA

In the 2023 doctoral student exchange program, Berkeley PhD student Urte Laukaityte (Dept. of Philosophy) spent three months in Vienna developing her dissertation in philosophy of psychiatry, aiming to formulate a broadly mechanistic non-reductionist account relevant to phenomena like psychogenic conditions, placebo/nocebo, culture-bound syndromes, transient mental illness, mass hysteria, hypnosis, and suchlike. Berkeley PhD students Harry Mizumoto (Dept. of Comparative Literature) and Alara Ucak (Dept. of History) also participated in the Berkeley-Austria Research Fellowship Program.

AUSTRIA > BERKELEY

The Austrian Studies Program welcomed Claudio Ströhle, a doctoral candidate from the Department of History at the University of Innsbruck who engages in comparative research on immigration in his research project entitled “Crossing Borders, Connecting Knowledge: A Comparative Study on Remittances and Transnational Participation in the History of Turkish Migration to Europe and the US.” The Program welcomed Anna Matzner, a doctoral student in Economics from the Vienna University of Economics and Business, who introduced a macroeconomic model to study the economic consequences of the transition to a green economy with a particular focus on the implications for inflation and income consequences at the household level in her current research project. Lastly, the Program welcomed Nadine Chiba from Johannes Kepler University Linz, Austria. Her area of study bore on Taxation and Reporting Obligations of Crypto-Assets.

Doe Library Funding

UC Berkeley Library maintains a strong collection in Austrian Studies which consists of more than 20,000 items and includes approximately 6500 books on Austrian history and important sets of reference works. This body of material, along with materials relating to Central European neighbors, constitutes a significant part of our broader European research collection. The collection is constantly growing: The Library acquired more than 100 books in Austrian Studies published in 2023, and the generous support of the Austrian Studies fund enabled us to acquire an additional 59 books during the same year.

These publications are in a variety of disciplines and correspond to the teaching and research needs of the university, especially within the humanities and the social sciences. They include literature and poetry (such as Maja Haderlap's Nachtfrauen, which was on the Shortlist of the Österreichischer Buchpreis), history from the middle ages and Habsburg rule (Women, nationalism, and social networks in the Habsburg monarchy, 1848-1918) until the present (COVID-19 and Pandemics in Austrian History), and the fine arts and architecture (books on the life of Mozart, Klimt and interior design, and contemporary architecture such as the Österreichische Gesellschaft für Architektur's Zwischen Raum und Substanz).
